LISTENING TEST

Part 1

You will hear some sentences. Choose the best reply to each sentence.

- 1

 - A. Thanks. I'll read it.
 - B. At the podium.
 - C. I forgot her present.

 - A. He's a world-famous sprinter.
 - B. Consult the manual.
 - C. It's very kind of you to say so.

- 3

 - A. Oh, that's convenient.
 - B. I ran out of gas.
 - C. It overlooks an amusement park.

- 4

 - A. I'll send the confirmation number.
 - B. No, there is no room.
 - C. The seat was fairly firm.

- 5

 - A. They did call for help.
 - B. Don't worry. She will soon.
 - C. Please transfer her call to me right away.

 - A. It's not a new garbage disposal.
 - B. Yes, and I replied.
 - C. I didn't get there in time.

- 7

 - A. It was tasty.
 - B. The lights will go out after 7:00 P.M.
 - C. When is your break?

Part 2

Complete the form below using NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS AND/OR A NUMBER for each answer.

Ascot Child Care Centre Enrolment form
Personal details Family name: Cullen Child's first name: 8 _____ Age: 9 _____ Birthday: 10 _____ Other children in the family: a brother aged 11 _____ Address: 12 _____, Brisbane Emergency contact number: 3467 8890 Relationship to child: 13 _____

Part 3

You will hear five different people talking about what they discovered when they read autobiographies by famous people. For questions 14-18, choose from the list (A – H) what each person says that they discovered. Use the letters only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use.

- | | |
|----------------------------|--|
| 14. Speaker 1 _____ | A. He had a terrible life before becoming famous. |
| 15. Speaker 2 _____ | B. He is a nicer person than he appears to be. |
| 16. Speaker 3 _____ | C. He is exactly the same in private as he is in public. |
| 17. Speaker 4 _____ | D. He would have preferred a different career. |
| 18. Speaker 5 _____ | E. He has a sad personal life. |
| | F. He feels that he is a very important person. |
| | G. He believes family to be the most important thing |
| | H. He was very unkind to other people after he became famous. |

Part 4

Label the map below. Write the correct letter, A-E, next to Questions 19-23

- 19. Student Centre
- 20. Health Centre
- 21. Internet Unit1
- 22. Complaint Office
- 23. Cafe

Part 5

You will hear three different extracts. For questions 24-29, choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear. There are two questions for each extract.

Extract One

You overhear two friends, John and Diane, discussing holiday plans.

24. John thinks Diane's indecision about the holiday is

- A. unreasonable in view of her financial position
- B. surprising since her holiday is well overdue
- C. understandable given how much money is involved

25. How does Diane feel about the prospect of a break from work?

- A. nervous that her boss will regret promoting her
- B. worried that staff will take advantage of her absence
- C. doubtful whether she can clear her backlog of work in time

Extract Two

You overhear two friends discussing a new film.

26. Why has the film been refused a certificate allowing it to be shown to children?

- A. The soundtrack makes it too frightening in places
- B. The plot is too psychologically complex
- C. The opening images are too violent

27. The friends agree that the original story on which the film is based

- A. is written in a rather unusual style
- B. gives a convincing portrayal of a historical character
- C. manages to keep the reader in suspense until the end

Extract Three

You hear an interview with the architect Ingrid Chapman, who is talking about an office building she has recently designed.

28. What does Ingrid think is the best feature of the new building?

- A. the amount of light that comes in
- B. the space she has created for staff interaction
- C. the way each floor has its own facilities

29. What does she suggest companies with outdated office buildings should do?

- A. employ her to design a more modern building
- B. ask staff what kind of workplace they would like
- C. use imagination to improve aspects of the offices

Questions 30-35

Complete the notes below. Write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS for each answer.

Advertising Effect

The important factor to consider

- The 30 _____ that customers must travel affects the probability that they will buy the product.

Methods of communication

- Advertising slogans are easier to remember if there is a 31 _____ played with them.
- Mandy's Candy Store appeals to people's sense of 32 _____ to draw in customers.
- To an ad campaign for digital products, it is 33 _____ that is extremely important.

Effect on your product sales

- The customer's 34 _____ after he or she experiences the ad is most important.

Marketing strategies

- On international flights, it is wise for advertisements to be displayed in the common 35 _____ of most passengers.

Visiting the Royal Parks

London has a well-deserved reputation as one of the greenest cities in Europe, with a huge number of open spaces across the center of the city. Tourists who are tired of the noise, crowds and excitement of sightseeing can always relax in a lovely, quiet 1_____ park.

The Royal Parks, such as St James's, Green Park, the Regent's Park, Hyde Park, Richmond, Greenwich, Bushy Park and Kensington Gardens, are beautifully maintained and popular with locals and visitors alike. Many are former hunting estates of English monarchs, preserved as 2_____ space while the city has grown up around them. They are ideal places to 3_____ and sunbathe in summer, enjoy gorgeous flower beds in spring and admire the changing leaves as autumn arrives.

The Royal Parks provide fantastic green routes in 4_____ that take cyclists away from traffic and through some of the most attractive areas of the capital. Picnics in the 5_____ are also a popular activity especially during the busy summer months.

6_____ are welcome in all the Royal Parks, although there are some places where they are not allowed or should be kept on a lead. These are clearly indicated within each park and are usually ecologically sensitive sites, children's play areas, restaurants, cafes and some sports areas. Ground nesting birds are particularly sensitive to disturbance by dogs and people. So it is necessary to observe the warning signs that are displayed during the nesting season. In Bushy Park and Richmond Park dogs should be kept away from the deer.

The Royal Parks are for everyone to enjoy.

Part 2

You want to visit a sea life centre. There are descriptions of ten sea life centres. Decide which sea life centre would be the most suitable for you. For questions 7 – 13, mark the correct letter (A – J) on your answer sheet.

7. You are studying sea creatures that are disappearing due to environmental changes, and want to attend a talk about them. You are also interested in learning about what's living on the beaches nearby.
8. Your art project is on colourful fish so you want to draw some, and take home some photos of unusual sea creatures. You and your family also want to swim at the centre afterwards.
9. You are interested in tiny sea animals, and want to actually handle them and learn what conditions they need to live in. You'd also enjoy seeing a feeding session for the larger creatures.
10. You are interested in creatures living in cold climates, and how they find food. You'd like to create something for your art homework too, and learn about photographing underwater wildlife.
11. You would love to swim with fish at the centre. You'd also like to learn about a range of sea environments, and about unusual creatures living at the bottom of our oceans.
12. You and your boss want somewhere with lots of space where you can sit and enjoy the view. Your boss would not manage a difficult walk to the beach. You want to eat lunch in a café.
13. You and Jenny have two children who cannot swim. Jenny wants them to be able to play safely in the water. You want to learn to sail. You need to park near the beach.

A. Amrith

A large beach which attracts quite a few visitors but doesn't get crowded because of its size. There are pleasant views out to sea and to Bedruth Island. Swimming is safe but surfing is not permitted. There is a café and parking but no shops.

B. Rockwater

We have sea creatures from both warm and cooler waters in our huge glass tanks. You can even go into the water in one, accompanied by staff – ask at the desk! We've also got fish that are rarely seen, as they're normally found in the very deepest water on our planet. No photography is allowed.

C. Splashdown

Perfect for family fun – our tropical swimming pool that's only divided from the penguins next door by a wall of glass! See them swimming in their pool while you're in yours! And don't miss their mealtimes - watch as they dive for their food.

D. Waterlife

We've got some of the rarest fish in the world, and the most beautiful. See the clown fish with its bright yellow and white stripes! Cameras aren't allowed, but amazing professional pictures are available in our shop. Then once you've seen everything, relax in our fantastic warm pool – strictly for humans!

E. Brightworld

Many creatures here are normally found in environments with low temperatures, such as our big group of penguins. Come and see our amazing displays of photos showing these birds diving for their supper! There are also short talks on using your camera for great shots of fish, and painting sessions, too.

F. Marine Life

Keen to protect our oceans? Come and see the work we're doing – there are presentations about it every hour. For example, we try to help shark numbers worldwide remain at healthy levels. And visit our amazing rock pool displays full of tiny creatures, typical of ones that make their homes near the sea just metres away!

G. Oceanwatch

The focus is on science here – there are films throughout the day about oceans around the world and the environmental problems facing marine wildlife. There's plenty to learn, and lots of souvenirs to buy! Free brochures full of information.

H. Waterlife

See some of the smallest sea life such as shrimps and starfish at our rock pool display - and even pick them up! Find out how clean sea water is essential to these creatures, and the effects of pollution. And don't miss watching the penguins and seals have their lunch – that's really popular!

I. Marple

Although unsuitable for surfing, this is a popular boating centre. Swimming is good and the many pools of shallow water are safe for children. Ocean Watersports Centre, which offers lessons in sailing and water skiing, is next to the beach. There is a steep path to the beach from the car park.

J. Goldenwave

Come and see the variety of warm sea environments at this centre – and creatures so small you might not have noticed them living on the beach, or the most beautiful fish living in our oceans. Bring your camera and learn to take the best photos ever!

Part 3

Read the text and choose the correct heading for each paragraph from the list of headings below. There are more headings than paragraphs, so you will not use all of them. You cannot use any heading more than once.

List of headings

- I. Perfect for a quiet holiday
- II. Land of nature wonders
- III. Bad for animals
- IV. A visit to the zoo
- V. Perfect for an active holiday
- VI. Difficult start
- VII. New perspectives
- VIII. New rules to follow

14.Paragraph A____

15.Paragraph B____

16.Paragraph C____

17.Paragraph D____

18.Paragraph E____

19.Paragraph F____

A. The mountains of Scotland (we call them the Highlands) are a wild and beautiful part of Europe. A golden eagle flies over the mountains. A deer walks through the silence of the forest. Salmon and trout swim in the clean, pure water of the rivers. Some say that not only fish swim in the deep water of Loch Ness. Speak to the people living by the Loch. Each person has a story of the monster, and some have photographs.

B. Tresco is a beautiful island with no cars, crowds or noise — just flowers, birds, long sandy beaches and the Tresco Abbey Garden. John and Wendy Pyatt welcome you to the Island Hotel, famous for delicious food, comfort and brilliant service. You will appreciate superb accommodation, free saunas and the indoor swimming pool.

C. The Camel and Wildlife Safari is a unique mixture of the traditional and modern. Kenya's countryside suits the Safari purposes exceptionally well. Tourists will have a chance to explore the bush country near Samburu, to travel on a camel back or to sleep out under the stars. Modern safari vehicles are always available for those who prefer comfort.

D. Arrival can be the hardest part of a trip. It is late, you are road-weary, and everything is new and strange. You need an affordable place to sleep, something to eat and drink, and probably a way to get around. But in general, it's a wonderful trip, full of wonderful and unusual places. Whether it is the first stop on a trip or the fifth city visited, every traveller feels a little overwhelmed stepping onto a new street in a new city.

E. No zoo has enough money to provide basic habitats or environments for all the species they keep. Most animals are put in a totally artificial environment, isolated from everything they would meet in their natural habitat. Many will agree that this isolation is harmful to the most of zoo inhabitants, it can even amount to cruelty.

F. A new London Zoo Project is a ten year project to secure the future for the Zoo and for many endangered animals. The plan has been devised by both animal and business experts to provide world-leading accommodation for all our animals, to more fully engage and inform people about conservation issues, to redesign certain aspects of Zoo layout.

Part 4

Read the following text for questions 20-27

Bring back the big cats

It's time to start returning vanished native animals to Britain, says John Vesty

There is a poem, written around 598 AD, which describes hunting a mystery animal called a llewyn. But what was it? Nothing seemed to fit, until 2006, when an animal bone, dating from around the same period, was found in the Kinsey Cave in northern England. Until this discovery, the lynx – a large spotted cat with tasselled ears – was presumed to have died out in Britain at least 6,000 years ago, before the inhabitants of these islands took up farming. But the 2006 find, together with three others in Yorkshire and Scotland, is compelling evidence that the lynx and the mysterious llewyn were in fact one and the same animal. If this is so, it would bring forward the tassel-eared cat's estimated extinction date by roughly 5,000 years.

However, this is not quite the last glimpse of the animal in British culture. A 9th-century stone cross from the Isle of Eigg shows, alongside the deer, boar and aurochs pursued by a mounted hunter, a speckled cat with tasselled ears. Were it not for the animal's backside having worn away with time, we could have been certain, as the lynx's stubby tail is unmistakable. But even without this key feature, it's hard to see what else the creature could have been. The lynx is now becoming the totemic animal of a movement that is transforming British environmentalism: rewilding.

Rewilding means the mass restoration of damaged ecosystems. It involves letting trees return to places that have been denuded, allowing parts of the seabed to recover from trawling and dredging, permitting rivers to flow freely again. Above all, it means bringing back missing species. One of the most striking findings of modern ecology is that ecosystems without large predators behave in completely different ways from those that retain them. Some of them drive dynamic processes that resonate through the whole food chain, creating niches for hundreds of species that might otherwise struggle to survive. The killers turn out to be bringers of life.

Such findings present a big challenge to British conservation, which has often selected arbitrary assemblages of plants and animals and sought, at great effort and expense, to prevent them from changing. It has tried to preserve the living world as if it were a jar of pickles, letting nothing in and nothing out, keeping nature in a state of arrested development. But ecosystems are not merely collections of species; they are also the dynamic and ever-shifting relationships between them. And this dynamism often depends on large predators.

At sea the potential is even greater: by protecting large areas from commercial fishing, we could once more see what 18th-century literature describes: vast shoals of fish being chased by fin and sperm whales, within sight of the English shore. This policy would also greatly boost catches in the surrounding seas; the fishing industry's insistence on scouring every inch of seabed, leaving no breeding reserves, could not be more damaging to its own interests.

Rewilding is a rare example of an environmental movement in which campaigners articulate what they are for rather than only what they are against. One of the reasons why the enthusiasm for rewilding is spreading so quickly in Britain is that it helps to create a more inspiring vision than the green movement's usual promise of 'Follow us and the world will be slightly less awful than it would otherwise have been.'

The lynx presents no threat to human beings: there is no known instance of one preying on people. It is a specialist predator of roe deer, a species that has exploded in Britain in recent decades, holding back, by intensive browsing, attempts to re-establish forests. It will also winkle out sika deer: an exotic species that is almost impossible for human beings to control, as it hides in impenetrable plantations of young trees. The attempt to reintroduce this predator marries well with the aim of bringing forests back to parts of our bare and barren uplands. The lynx requires deep cover, and as such presents little risk to sheep and other livestock, which are supposed, as a condition of farm subsidies, to be kept out of the woods.

On a recent trip to the Cairngorm Mountains, I heard several conservationists suggest that the lynx could be reintroduced there within 20 years. If trees return to the bare hills elsewhere in Britain, the big cats could soon follow. There is nothing extraordinary about these proposals, seen from the perspective of anywhere else in Europe. The lynx has now been reintroduced to the Jura Mountains, the Alps, the Vosges in eastern France and the Harz mountains in Germany, and has re-established itself in many more places. The European population has tripled since 1970 to roughly 10,000. As with wolves, bears, beavers, boar, bison, moose and many other species, the lynx has been able to spread as farming has left the hills and people discover that it is more lucrative to protect charismatic wildlife than to hunt it, as tourists will pay for the chance to see it. Large-scale rewilding is happening almost everywhere – except Britain.

Here, attitudes are just beginning to change. Conservationists are starting to accept that the old preservation-jar model is failing, even on its own terms. Already, projects such as Trees for Life in the Highlands provide a hint of what might be coming. An organisation is being set up that will seek to catalyse the rewilding of land and sea across Britain, its aim being to reintroduce that rarest of species to British ecosystems: hope.

Questions 20-24

Write the correct letter, A, B, C or D.

- 20. What did the 2006 discovery of the animal bone reveal about the lynx?
- A. Its physical appearance was very distinctive.
 - B. Its extinction was linked to the spread of farming.
 - C. It vanished from Britain several thousand years ago.
 - D. It survived in Britain longer than was previously thought.
- 21. What point does the writer make about large predators in the third paragraph?
- A. Their presence can increase biodiversity.
 - B. They may cause damage to local ecosystems.
 - C. Their behaviour can alter according to the environment.
 - D. They should be reintroduced only to areas where they were native.
- 22. What does the writer suggest about British conservation in the fourth paragraph?
- A. It has failed to achieve its aims.
 - B. It is beginning to change direction.
 - C. It has taken a misguided approach.
 - D. It has focused on the most widespread species.
- 23. Protecting large areas of the sea from commercial fishing would result in
- A. practical benefits for the fishing industry.
 - B. some short-term losses to the fishing industry.

- C. widespread opposition from the fishing industry.
- D. certain changes to techniques within the fishing industry.

24. According to the author, what distinguishes rewilding from other environmental campaigns?

- A. Its objective is more achievable.
- B. Its supporters are more articulate.
- C. Its positive message is more appealing.
- D. It is based on sounder scientific principles

Questions 25-27

25. Britain could become the first European country to reintroduce the lynx.

- A) True B) False C) Not Given

26. The large growth in the European lynx population since 1970 has exceeded conservationists' expectations.

- A) True B) False C) Not Given

27. Changes in agricultural practices have extended the habitat of the lynx in Europe.

- A) True B) False C) Not Given

Part 5

Communication in science

Science plays an increasingly significant role in people's lives, making the faithful communication of scientific developments more important than ever. Yet such communication is fraught with challenges that can easily distort discussions, leading to unnecessary confusion and misunderstandings.

Some problems stem from the esoteric nature of current research and the associated difficulty of finding sufficiently faithful terminology. Abstraction and complexity are not signs that a given scientific direction is wrong, as some commentators have suggested, but are instead a tribute to the success of human ingenuity in meeting the increasingly complex challenges that nature presents. They can, however, make communication more difficult. But many of the biggest challenges for science reporting arise because in areas of evolving research, scientists themselves often only partly understand the full implications of any particular advance or development. Since that dynamic applies to most of the scientific developments that directly affect people's lives global warming, cancer research, diet studies – learning how to overcome it is critical to spurring a more informed scientific debate among the broader public.

Ambiguous word choices are the source of some misunderstandings. Scientists often employ colloquial terminology, which they then assign a specific meaning that is impossible to fathom without proper training. The term “relativity,” for example, is intrinsically misleading. Many interpret the theory to mean that everything is relative and there are no absolutes. Yet although the measurements any observer makes depend on his coordinates and reference frame, the physical phenomena he measures have an invariant description that transcends that observer’s particular coordinates. Einstein’s theory of relativity is really about finding an invariant description of physical phenomena. True, Einstein agreed with the idea that his theory would have been better named “Invarianten theorie.” But the term “relativity” was already entrenched at the time for him to change.

“The uncertainty principle” is another frequently abused term. It is sometimes interpreted as a limitation on observers and their ability to make measurements.

But it is not about intrinsic limitations on any one particular measurement; it is about the inability to precisely measure particular pairs of quantities simultaneously? The first interpretation is perhaps more engaging from a philosophical or political perspective. It’s just not what the science is about.

Even the word “theory” can be a problem. Unlike most people, who use the word to describe a passing conjecture that they often regard as suspect, physicists have very specific ideas in mind when they talk about theories. For physicists, theories entail a definite physical framework embodied in a set of fundamental assumptions about the world that lead to a specific set of equations and predictions – ones that are borne out by successful predictions. Theories aren’t necessarily shown to be correct or complete immediately. Even Einstein took the better part of a decade to develop the correct version of his theory of general relativity. But eventually both the ideas and the measurements settle down and theories are either proven correct, abandoned or absorbed into other, more encompassing theories.

“Global warming” is another example of problematic terminology. Climatologists predict more drastic fluctuations in temperature and rainfall – not necessarily that every place will be warmer. The name sometimes subverts the debate, since it lets people argue that their winter was worse, so how could there be global warming? Clearly “global climate change” would have been a better name. But not all problems stem solely from poor word choices. Some stem from the intrinsically complex nature of much of modern science. Science sometimes transcends this limitation: remarkably, chemists were able to detail the precise chemical processes involved in the destruction of the ozone layer, making the evidence that chlorofluorocarbon gases (Freon, for example) were destroying the ozone layer indisputable.

Questions 28-30

Choose the correct letter A, B, C or D.

28. Why is faithful science communication important?

- A. Science plays an increasingly significant role in people's lives.
- B. Science is fraught with challenges public are interested in.
- C. The nature of complexity in science communication leads to confusion.
- D. Scientific inventions are more important than ever before.

29. What is the reason that the author believes for the biggest challenges for science reporting

- A. phenomenon such as global warming, cancer research, diet studies is too complex.
- B. Scientists themselves often only partly understand the Theory of Evolution
- C. Scientists do not totally comprehend the meaning of certain scientific evolution
- D. Scientists themselves often partly understand the esoteric communication nature

30. According to the 3rd paragraph, the reference to the term and example of "theory of relativity" is to demonstrate

- A. theory of relativity is about an invariant physical phenomenon
- B. common people may be misled by the inaccurate choice of scientific phrase
- C. the term "relativity," is designed to be misleading public
- D. everything is relative and there is no absolute existence

Questions 31-35

Complete the following summary of the paragraphs of Reading Passage

Using NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS from the Reading Passage for each answer.

Science Communication is fraught with challenges that can easily distort discussions, leading to unnecessary confusion and misunderstandings. Firstly, Ambiguous 31_____ are the source of some misunderstandings. Common people without proper training do not understand clearly or deeply a specific scientific meaning via the 32_____ scientists often employed. Besides, the measurements any 33_____ makes can not be confined to describe in a(n) constant 34_____ yet the phenomenon can be. What's more, even the word "theory" can be a problem. Theories aren't necessarily shown to be correct or complete immediately since scientists often evolved better versions of specific theories, a good example can be the theory of 35_____. Thus, most importantly people have to recognize that science can be complex.

TEST B

Part 1

You will hear some sentences. Choose the best reply to each sentence.

- 1
- A. No, they are distributed next week.
 - B. Sure, I'll send him an e-mail.
 - C. She wants to get the promotion.

- A. Is that really necessary?
 - B. I returned the equipment.
 - C. I'm not a tenant.

- 3
- A. I think it was less than 60 dollars.
 - B. In a department store.
 - C. It wasn't difficult at all.

- A. Front row seats.
 - B. Mr. Gibson will close the door.
 - C. A famous novelist.

- 5
- A. It's a comfortable chair.
 - B. Please sit anywhere.
 - C. Keep that in mind.

- 6
- A. No, I forgot to call ahead.
 - B. That was helpful.
 - C. She departed on schedule.

- 7
- A. Before 5:00 P.M.
 - B. The secretary should know.
 - C. No, she never called back.

Part 2

Questions 8-12. Complete the notes.

Write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS AND/OR NUMBERS for each answer.

Basic Details of Project

Pre-phase	involves selecting rooms & 8 _____
Phase 1:	time needed: 3 days staff involved: Jenna, Marco, & 9 _____
Phase 2:	time needed: 10 _____ staff involved: 11 _____, with assistance from 12 _____

Part 3

You will hear five short extracts in which people are talking about the benefits of volunteering. For questions 13-17, choose from the list A-H what each speaker says. Use the letters only once. There are three extra letters which you do not need to use.

- | | |
|---------------------------|---|
| 13. Speaker 1_____ | A. I developed leadership skills. |
| 14. Speaker 2_____ | B. I discovered a natural talent. |
| 15. Speaker 3_____ | C. It made me feel part of the wider community. |
| 16. Speaker 4_____ | D. It opened up a new career opportunity for me. |
| 17. Speaker 5_____ | E. It increased my confidence. |
| | F. It motivated me to improve my own life. |
| | G. I made great friends for life. |
| | H. I understood the importance of teamwork for the first time. |

Part 4

Label the map below. Write the correct letter, A-H, next to Questions 18-22

- 18.Box Office
- 19.Children's Room
- 20.Cafe
- 21.Multimedia Room
- 22.Showroom

Part 5

You will hear three different extracts. For questions 23-28, choose the answer (A, B or C) which fits best according to what you hear. There are two questions for each extract.

Extract One

You two people discussing a sports competition.

23. What was the woman's initial reaction to the news of the planned event?

- A. looking forward to attending it
- B. worried about feeling discomfort because of it
- C. happy with the potential benefits it could bring

24. What is the reason the man is unhappy about the upcoming event?

- A. He believes that it is a very wasteful operation.
- B. He is concerned that the main venue may not get finished on time.
- C. He thinks that the people in charge should be replaced.

Extract Two

You hear two students talking about a university project.

25. What has caused the man most annoyance?

- A. unclear instructions from the tutor
- B. the fact that the project deadline has been moved
- C. how much help he received from the group

26. How does the woman react to the man's problem?

- A. She expresses her sympathy.
- B. She believes that he is exaggerating.
- C. She thinks he will learn from the experience.

Extract Three

You hear two people talking about a movie.

27. Both people believe that

- A. the story was believable.
- B. the actors were chosen poorly.
- C. the movie made you think.

28. According to woman, what was the best thing about the film?

- A. the camerawork
- B. the soundtrack
- C. the cast

Part 6

Questions 29 – 35. Complete the notes below.

Write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS for each answer.

Animal Sense

Smell

- Dogs have a greater sense of smell than human beings and are able to tell.
- Some animals can smell odours such as 29 _____ recognised by the human nose.
- Some beetles can only distinguish the odours of certain plants.
- Bees, feeling threatened, will use their 30 _____ before they sting.
- Queen bees, which can sting multiple times, use their feet to keep 31 _____ over the colony.
- A female 32 _____ decides whether or not to mate with a male according to the quality of his scent.

Hearing

- Sound through vibrations can be recognized by beetles without ears by using their 33 _____
- They can locate prey living in 34 _____ by tracking the vibrations.

Sight

- Snakes are able to search for food by detecting 35 _____ from the mouths of their prey.

READING TEST

Touring New York City and visiting its attractions can be a costly affair, especially if you visit the Empire State Building, Statue of Liberty, or attend special events and dine in fancy restaurants. However, this does not indicate that you have to empty your pockets to experience the New York life and its 1_____. The city offers a fair share of landmark attractions and activities that are absolutely free and may actually present a more local insight of the city than paid attractions. Mentioned below is a list of free things to do in the city that never sleeps.

Part 3

Read the text and choose the correct heading for each paragraph from the list of headings below.

There are more headings than paragraphs, so you will not use all of them. You cannot use any heading more than once.

List of headings

- I. Health benefits of soursops
- II. The soursop tree
- III. Side effects of soursops
- IV. Effectiveness in destroying cancerous cells
- V. Recent scientific discoveries on the tree
- VI. Nutrients in soursop fruits
- VII. The soursop fruit
- VIII. The use of various parts of the tree

15.Paragraph A____

16.Paragraph B____

17.Paragraph C____

18.Paragraph D____

19.Paragraph E____

20.Paragraph F____

Soursop Fruit

- A. The soursop tree is known for its delicious fruits. The fruit is large with a thin, greencolored skin covered with conical nibs. The pulp is white and soft, and quite delicious. It has both sweet and sour taste. The fruit can be eaten directly, or its pulp can be pressed and strained to extract the juice, which is not only delectable, but also rich in many essential nutrients.
- B. The flesh or pulp of the fruit, from which the juice is extracted, is very rich in fiber, carbohydrates, and other nutrients, like vitamin B1 and B2, vitamin C, and potassium. On the other hand, it is quite low in saturated fats and sodium. About 1 cup of undiluted juice or nectar contains 160 calories.
- C. The soursop tree is mainly known for its medicinal properties. Certain compounds found in the extracts derived from the fruits, seeds, bark, and the leaves of the soursop tree have been observed to be effective in destroying cancerous cells in some laboratory studies. The leaves of this tree have been found to be particularly effective in killing cancer cells without harming the healthy cells of the body. Moreover, the extract derived from the leaves does not affect the immune system adversely, unlike the chemotherapy drugs.

- D. Apart from the ability to kill cancer cells, the soursop tree has several other health benefits. The seeds of this fruit can be used for inducing vomiting, while the juice can be immensely beneficial for treating urethritis. It can also help treat hematuria which is a condition characterized by the presence of blood in urine. Soursop juice can help alleviate liver ailments as well. The juice is usually taken while fasting in order to cure liver problems. It may also prove beneficial in conditions like leprosy.
- E. The various parts of the tree, including its leaves and the young shoots have been used for conditions, like cough, catarrh, fever, gallbladder problems, inflammation and swelling, diarrhea, indigestion, rheumatism, dysentery, eczema, and some other skin problems. The pulp of the fruit, as well as the crushed leaves of the tree, can be used as a poultice to ensure fast healing of wounds.
- F. To sum up, soursop is not only a delicious, but also a very nutritious fruit. However, it is imperative to talk to a physician before considering to use it for medicinal purposes. If taken in large dosage, it can induce vomiting and depress the cardiovascular system. It can also induce uterine contractions, for which pregnant women should not use this fruit for medicinal purposes. All these possible side effects need to be considered before using this fruit, or any other part of the tree for the treatment of cancer and other ailments.

Read the following text for questions 21-29

The contribution of language to business

People say that business is all about relationships, but the truth is that business is really all about language communication. Languages make either a direct or indirect contribution to business and industry—from acquiring and retaining customers to improving employee engagement and performance. At the most fundamental level, business cannot happen without communication. This is even more true in the era of globalization. As geographic borders become porous and the world flattens, effective communication with customers, employees, partners, suppliers, and other stakeholders across the globe becomes essential to successfully running a company.

There is no universal agreement on how significant the language factor is; nor the degree of language proficiency in contribution to the success of business and industry. In large modern enterprises, people have the unique experience of working with thousands of organizations across different industries and sectors that are tackling this very problem. Companies adjust to these demographic, cultural, and economic trends and proactively build workforces with the skills and capabilities needed to grow and thrive in this multicultural and international economy. Although the combination of business functions and processes impacted by improved communication may vary from company to company, language skills consistently deliver tangible business value and results for organizations that invest in language training.

Although English is dominant for international transactions, many business people also think and deal in scores of languages. Companies that operate solely in English will miss opportunities to capitalize on the explosive growth in developing and untapped markets at home and abroad. These companies also run the risk of misunderstandings with customers, and with members of an increasingly global workforce. Moreover, travellers on business need to have different levels of language proficiency. On a basic level, they are able to use the language at the airport and to check in at the hotel. Besides, they need a high language proficiency to deal with workers at their offshore factories.

One of the biggest business advantages of a workforce that can effectively communicate in more than one language is the ability to reach new markets—both at home and abroad. On the domestic side, for example, the U.S. has become even more of a melting pot than in the past, with minorities accounting for a greater proportion of the total population. Accordingly, in domestic venues, the consumer contacts and service activities also ask for workers with good skills of different languages, such as at restaurants or in duty-free stores.

The language proficiency needed to hold a conversation is quite different from that needed for negotiating. Receptionists and telephonists are the first point of contact between firms. The language proficiency they need is to gather basic factual information. Yet negotiating well in another language is one of the most difficult skills, especially nowadays when it is often done at a distance by videoconference, teleconference or email. It is also one of the most important things to do well, with usually a clear financial penalty for doing it badly. To really master the negotiating skill, negotiators need a thorough understanding of the very many phrases they might hear during a negotiation and an ability to show fine shades in meaning in their own contributions. Similar to negotiating, certain occupations like shipping, also require unbroken and detailed communication between officials.

When it comes to negotiation, the interpreters and translators are needed. Interpreters and translators aid communication by converting messages or text from one language into another language. Although some people do both, interpreting and translating are different professions: interpreters work with spoken communication, and translators work with written communication. The selection of interpreters and translators is critical. Both the loyalty and accuracy of the interpreters and translators must be put at the top of agenda. Thus, loyalty to the speaker and the original appears to be a hallmark of professionals more so than of amateurs.

Who can judge the performance of the interpreters? A person with language proficiency is needed in the negotiating team to check on the interpreters, guaranteeing the quality and accuracy of the interpretation. Listeners are presumably listening only to the output and as such not aware of the structure of the source speech. Only an experienced expert will understand the constraints of any given situation and be in a position to judge. Only she (or he) can assess just how the speed, density and complexity of the speech will affect interpretation in any particular language combination. And even this task is not easy: interpreters are trained to listen and speak at the same time, not to listen to two different audio streams. Therefore, the check-on is best accomplished by those trained to teach or with enough experience to have mastered this skill.

Businesses may ask help from local consultants who are responsible for hiring local workers or train company managers to deal with local consumers. That was the case with CommScope, a multibillion dollar telecom equipment manufacturer with customers, employees, and partners in 18 countries across the world. In the wake of these transactions, the company began offering Jacqueline K. Crofton, a local resident, language training to key employees and executives. The goal of the training was not to make employees fluent in the new language, as much as to give them a degree of functional proficiency. "In order to advance well in new markets and with new customers, we had to be able to at least understand and communicate at a basic level, even with the use of interpreters," says David Hartsoe, manager of CommScope's Global Learning Center. In the long run, effective communication will definitely help their employees stay positive and productive.

- C. sensible.
- D. expensive.

Part 5

Architecture in Britain

From the Middle Ages to the 20th century, what are the influences and movements that have shaped the changing face of British architecture?

Romano-British culture—and that included architecture along with language, religion, political organisation and the arts—survived long after the Roman withdrawal. And although the Anglo-Saxons had a sophisticated building style of their own, little survives to bear witness to their achievements as the vast majority of Anglo-Saxon buildings were made of wood.

Even so, the period between the Norman landing at Pevensey in 1066 and the day in 1485 when Richard III lost his horse and his head at Bosworth, ushering in the Tudors and the Early Modern period, marks a rare flowering of British buildings. And it is all the more remarkable because the underlying ethos of medieval architecture was "fitness for purpose". The great cathedrals and parish churches that lifted up their towers to heaven were not only acts of devotion in stone; they were also fiercely functional buildings. Castles served their particular purpose and their battlements and turrets were for use rather than ornament. The rambling manor houses of the later Middle Ages, however, were primarily homes, their owners achieving respect and maintaining status by their hospitality and good lordship rather than the grandeur of their buildings. In a sense, the buildings of the 16th century were also governed by fitness for purpose—only now, the purpose was very different. In domestic architecture, in particular, buildings were used to display status and wealth.

This stately and curious workmanship showed itself in various ways. A greater sense of security led to more outward-looking buildings, as opposed to the medieval arrangement where the need for defence created houses that faced inward onto a courtyard or series of courtyards. This allowed for much more in the way of exterior ornament. The rooms themselves tended to be bigger and lighter—as an expensive commodity, the use of great expanses of glass was in itself a statement of wealth. There was also a general move towards balanced and symmetrical exteriors with central entrances. With the exception of Indigo Jones (1573-1652), whose confident handling of classical detail and proportion set him apart from all other architects of the period, most early 17th century buildings tended to take the innocent exuberance of late Tudor work one step further. But during the 1640s and 50s the Civil War and its aftermath sent many gentlemen and nobles to the Continent either to escape the fighting or, when the war was lost, to follow Charles II into exile. There they came into contact with French, Dutch and Italian architecture and, with Charles's restoration in 1660, there was a flurry of building activity as royalists reclaimed their property and built themselves houses reflecting the latest European trends. The British Baroque was a reassertion of authority, an expression of absolutist ideology by men who remembered a world turned upside down during the Civil War. The style is heavy and rich, sometimes overblown and melodramatic. The politics which underpin it are questionable, but its products are breathtaking.

The huge glass-and-iron Crystal Palace, designed by Joseph Paxton to house the Great Exhibition of 1851, shows another strand to 19th century architecture—one which embraced new industrial processes. But it wasn't long before even this confidence in progress came to be regarded with suspicion. Mass production resulted in buildings and furnishings that were too perfect, as the individual craftsman no longer had a major role in their creation. Railing against the dehumanising effects of industrialisation, reformers like John Ruskin and William Morris made a concerted effort to return to hand-crafted, pre-industrial manufacturing techniques. Morris's influence grew from the production of furniture and textiles, until by the 1880s a generation of principled young architects was following his call for good, honest construction.

The most important trends in early 20th century architecture simply passed Britain by. Whilst Gropius was working on cold, hard expanses of glass, and Le Corbusier was experimenting with the use of reinforced concrete frames, we had staid establishment architects like Edwin Lutyens producing Neo-Georgian and Renaissance country houses for an outmoded landed class. In addition there were slightly batty architect-craftsmen, the heirs of William Morris, still trying to turn the clock back to before the Industrial Revolution by making chairs and spurning new technology. Only a handful of Modern Movement buildings of any real merit were produced here during the 1920s and 1930s, and most of these were the work of foreign architects such as Serge Chermayeff, Berthold Lubetkin and Erno Goldfinger who had settled in this country.

Questions 30-35

READING TEST

Part 1

Read the text. Fill in each gap with ONE word. You must use a word which is somewhere in the rest of the text.

Fire Crews Hunt Escaped Hamster

Eight firefighters have been called in to help find an escaped hamster. Two crews used a chocolate-covered camera and a vacuum cleaner to try and locate the missing 1_____, called Fudgie, at the home of a six-year-old girl in Dunbar, Scotland.

The girl's mother said: 'We came down for breakfast and discovered Fudgie had opened the top lid of her cage and had made her way into the kitchen and we think she has gone through a small hole in the floor.'

The fire crews spent five hours trying to recover the pet after it ran down a hole in the kitchen floor. But, the hamster still refused to come out of the 2_____.

In the search for 3_____, the firefighters took the family cooker and gas pipes apart. They also dropped a mini-camera coated with chocolate under the floorboards. They then hoped to take out the hamster using a vacuum cleaner. Despite all their efforts, they failed to find Fudgie.

In the end, the 4_____ put another camera down the hole and left it under the floorboards, connected to the screen of the family home computer, to see if Fudgie appeared. Besides, the 5_____ and her parents regularly dropped food through the 6_____ for the 7_____.

At last, after eight days the hamster returned to her cage safe and sound. She crawled from the hole in the kitchen floor early in the morning. It was the girl's father who first found Fudgie and locked the runaway hamster.

The girl said that day it was like Christmas morning for her. Her parents added that they too felt extremely happy when Fudgie had finally 8_____.

Part 2

The people all want to attend a course. Read the descriptions of eight courses. Decide which course would be the most suitable for each person. For Questions 9-13, select the best course.

9. Harriet is 71, and is interested in painting and drawing. She would like to go somewhere in the summer where she can learn new tips and paint attractive scenery.
10. Belinda works for a large Art Company and she feels she needs to improve her computer skills. She already has a basic understanding of some common computer programmes, but she wants to learn how to organise her work and store information.
11. Jenny is interested in a career in design, and wants to learn how to create art and change photographs using special computer programmes. She wants a course that will fit into her normal school day.
12. George is unable to travel because he has difficulty walking, but he wants to learn more about the wildlife and scenery in different parts of the world.
13. Chris wants a change in career, so he's looking for a full-time course in which he can learn everything there is to know about photography and how to use computers to change and sell his work.

A. Form and Colour

This is year-long course is perfect for people who want to learn about how to use a camera and who want to take it up as a profession. Students will learn how to use light and shade, colour and different shapes. The course will also teach students to change their work using computer technology. Tips will be given on how best to get started in the profession.

B. Practice makes Perfect

Learn about how to use computer software to make your work life easier. This course is designed for people who use computers regularly as part of their career, but who feel they are unable to make the most of the technology. Learn about new software for storing documents and photographs and keeping records. This evening class runs for ten weeks from September to December.

C. Armchair Explorer

This is a series of daytime lectures by people who have lived and worked in wild places. Each of the six talks will focus on a different continent. Lecturers will show photographs of the animals and plants, and explain why they are only found in one area. Lecturers will include Leo Holland, a scientist from the Antarctic project, and Milly Oliphant, who researches birds in the Amazon rainforest. Tea and Biscuits provided.

D. Art Starter

Are you interested in a career in art? If so, this full-time, eight-week course will be perfect for you. Learn about different methods used by artists, including painting, drawing, photography and computer design. Artists will create work for an exhibition which will be displayed in the Town Hall for one month in September. Top businessmen and women from the design industry will be invited to attend the exhibition, so this could be a great start to your career!

E. Wild Design

Whether you want a career in art, or you just want to enjoy your hobby, this holiday course is for you. Wild Design is a two-week summer course situated on the wild coast of South Wales. We teach all kinds of art, including photography and painting, and the wild sea, beautiful flowers and great wildlife will definitely give you lots of creative ideas. Even if you already have a good understanding of art, you are sure to learn something new from our team of professional tutors.

F. Explore your Imagination

Do you want to show your friends a photograph of you beside the Egyptian pyramids or in the jungles of Borneo? Well now you can tell your friends that you have travelled the world without actually leaving the country! Join this evening class and learn how to use the latest technology and software to change photographs to a professional standard. You will also learn how to make your own computer designs using the computer programmes used by professionals.

G. Technology for You

Do you feel as if everyone is using a computer except you? Join in this five-day course and learn the basics. You'll learn how to store your personal files, send emails and use simple programmes to write and print letters. In the afternoons you will have the choice of either learning how to make Birthday Cards and other designs on a computer, or you can join our 'Basic computers for Work' class.

H. Wildlife Photographer

Travel to a different wild place every week and learn how to take photographs of animals, plants and scenery. Our expert teachers will advise you how to take the best pictures. This course will run for six weeks on Saturdays. Students should already have a good understanding of photography and their own equipment. The class is suitable for everyone, as there is very little walking involved.

Part 3

Read the text and choose the correct heading for each paragraph from the list of headings below.

There are more headings than paragraphs, so you will not use all of them. You cannot use any heading more than once.

List of headings

1. Failing relationships and negative feelings
2. Winning the lottery may not make you happier
3. What is Hedonic Adaptation?
4. Philanthropy benefits the giver
5. Wealth management issues
6. Spend your winnings wisely
7. What you do, not what you buy
8. Behavioral Changes
9. Case of Lisa Arcand

14.Paragraph A__

15.Paragraph B__

16.Paragraph C__

17.Paragraph D__

18.Paragraph E__

19.Paragraph F__

20.Paragraph G__

21.Paragraph H__

A. This is partially due to a phenomenon called hedonic adaptation or the hedonic treadmill. This describes our tendency to become used to the happiness after experiencing it for the first time. For example, landing the job that you have always wanted may give you happiness but the thrill wears off after a certain period of time. Though it may sound a little bit counterintuitive, hedonic adaptation helps us maintain a steady and emotional equilibrium which makes us less sensitive to any changes including negative events. This phenomenon allows us to revert back to our default emotional state after experiencing high levels of emotion whether good or bad.

- B. Piecing together this information, winning the lottery would make you happy but only for a short period of time. After getting used to the luxuries of having enough funds for grandiose homes, better food, and nicer clothes, we go back to how we used to feel before we won the prize. Therefore, winning the lottery doesn't guarantee happiness, in fact, lottery winners even reported being unhappy after they have won the prize.
- C. One of the reasons why this is so is because large sums of money can be a lot to manage. Take for example the case of Lisa Arcand from Massachusetts. She won $1 million in 2004 and like all winners, she went on lavish vacations and bought a nice house. However, a million dollars isn't much for taxes; she even opened a restaurant to keep the cash flowing but to no avail, losing everything in 2007. Another example is Michael Carroll who turned from lottery winner to factory worker, even after winning £9.7 million in 2002. Janite Lee, Willie Hurt, and Lou Eisenberg, are just some of the many names that have won the lottery but went from rags to riches and back to rags because of poor financial decisions.
- D. Aside from difficulty in managing finances, winning the lottery can be an isolating experience. Unwanted attention and unwanted requests for money from peers can make us paranoid and anxious. Eventually, lottery winners wind up cutting themselves from others because of the fear of being used as a just a source of money than a source of friendship.
- E. While the constant fear of losing everything can haunt lottery winners, some even become greedier than they were before winning. A study conducted by social-psychologist Paul Piff at the UC Berkeley Campus in California, proves that gaining wealth can actually change our behaviour drastically. Using a rigged game of Monopoly, Piff chose a player at random to play the game at a certain advantage such as more starting money, and better ability to move around the board. In just after 15 minutes, the advantaged players displayed dramatic change in behaviour including forceful movement of boardgame pieces, speaking louder, and even minute things such as eating more snacks compared to other players.
- F. Winning the lottery will make you happy but thanks to hedonic adaptation, the thrill and excitement of spending all that cash won't last long. While most of us would indulge in a fabulous lifestyle after winning, there are ways that winning the lottery can make us happier than having the latest supercar in your garage. It's that old saying it's not what you have, but what you do that counts. The key to happiness, it seems, is to invest in experiences. Think carefully before you start spending.

- G. Having a lot of money can open new opportunities for us to enjoy life more than just having expensive things. With hedonic adaptation embedded in our systems, finding what really guarantees happiness can be a hurdle on the way. However, findings show that people tend to adapt faster to extrinsic and material things than we do on experience. Travelling, exploring, and even learning a new skill, gives us more gratification than having the latest clothes from your favourite designer or luxury brand. Therefore, investing in experiences makes us happier than investing in things.
- H. Another thing that would help you convert your money into happiness is through charity. Believe it or not, giving others provides more happiness than spending it on yourself. A study by the University of British Columbia and Harvard Business School proved that spending more on others provides more happiness than spending it on yourself. Participants were asked to spend money however they wish, be it on themselves or unto others. Afterwards, a survey was conducted to rate their level of happiness. The group who donated their money to charity feel happier than those who spent it on themselves.

While having money does make us happy today, it doesn't guarantee our happiness in the long-run. Thanks to hedonic adaptation, we get used to the emotions that we feel but we can get around it by making every penny count – not on materialistic things – but on experiences and by giving back to the community.

Britain needs strong TV industry

Comedy writer Armando Iannucci has called for an industry-wide defence of the BBC and British programme-makers. "The Thick of It" creator made his remarks in the annual MacTaggart Lecture at the Edinburgh TV Festival.

"It's more important than ever that we have more strong, popular channels... that act as beacons, drawing audiences to the best content," he said. Speaking earlier, Culture

Secretary John Whittingdale rejected suggestions that he wanted to dismantle the BBC.

'Champion supporters'

Iannucci co-wrote "I'm Alan Partridge", wrote the movie "In the Loop" and created and wrote the hit "HBO" and "Sky Atlantic show Veep". He delivered the 40th annual MacTaggart Lecture, which has previously been given by Oscar winner Kevin Spacey, former BBC director general Greg Dyke, Jeremy Paxman and Rupert Murdoch. Iannucci said: "Faced with a global audience, British television needs its champion supporters."

He continued his praise for British programming by saying the global success of American TV shows had come about because they were emulating British television. "The best US shows are modelling themselves on what used to make British TV so world-beating," he said. "US prime-time schedules are now littered with those quirky formats from the UK - the "Who Do You Think You Are"'s and the variants on "Strictly Come Dancing" - as well as the single-camera non-audience sitcom, which we brought into the mainstream first. We have changed international viewing for the better."

With the renewal of the BBC's royal charter approaching, Iannucci also praised the corporation. He said: "If public service broadcasting - one of the best things we've ever done creatively as a country - if it was a car industry, our ministers would be out championing it overseas, trying to win contracts, boasting of the British jobs that would bring." In July, the government issued a green paper setting out issues that will be explored during negotiations over the future of the BBC, including the broadcaster's size, its funding and governance.

Primarily Mr Whittingdale wanted to appoint a panel of five people, but finally he invited two more people to advise on the channer renewal, namely former Channel 4 boss Dawn Airey and journalism professor Stewart Purvis, a former editor-in-chief of ITN. Iannucci bemoaned the lack of "creatives" involved in the discussions.

"When the media, communications and information industries make up nearly 8% our GDP, larger than the car and oil and gas industries put together, we need to be heard, as those industries are heard. But when I see the panel of experts who've been asked by the culture secretary to take a root and branch look at the BBC, I don't see anyone who is a part of that cast and crew list. I see executives, media owners, industry gurus, all talented people - but not a single person who's made a classic and enduring television show."

Part 5

Read the text below and answer Questions 31-35.

'Don't be modest'

Iannucci suggested one way of easing the strain on the licence fee was "by pushing ourselves more commercially abroad".

"Use the BBC's name, one of the most recognised brands in the world," he said. "And use the reputation of British television across all networks, to capitalise financially overseas. Be more aggressive in selling our shows, through advertising, through proper international subscription channels, freeing up BBC Worldwide to be fully commercial, whatever it takes.

"Frankly, don't be icky and modest about making money, let's monetise the beezesus Mary and Joseph out of our programmes abroad so that money can come back, take some pressure off the licence fee at home and be invested in even more ambitious quality shows, that can only add to our value."

Mr Whittingdale, who was interviewed by ITV News' Alastair Stewart at the festival, said he wanted an open debate about whether the corporation should do everything it has done in the past. He said he had a slight sense that people who rushed to defend the BBC were "trying to have an argument that's never been started".

"Whatever my view is, I don't determine what programmes the BBC should show," he added. "That's the job of the BBC." Mr Whittingdale said any speculation that the Conservative Party had always wanted to change the BBC due to issues such as its editorial line was "absolute nonsense".

[illegible]

Sample Answer

Dear Sir,

I am writing this letter to invite you to the retirement ceremony of my father who is going to retire from his service by the end of next week on the 31st of July.

As mentioned above that day is very special for my parents and I really want to make it memorable for them yet I am a bit worried about the management of your schedule. So, I thought to arrange a special party at my residence located in Ambala City and want you to perform live during the event.

My father is among big fans of yours. I wish to surprise him with the performance of his favourite singer during the occasion. Therefore, I am inviting you to join the celebrations and at the same time make it more enjoyable with your melodious voice.

Feel free to call me on 7421252432 for any further details I am hoping to get your positive response on this matter.

Thanking You.

Yours Faithfully,

Name

Task 2

In some countries, many more people are choosing to live alone nowadays than in the past. Do you think this is a positive or negative development?

This image shows a full page of white paper with horizontal blue ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page, providing a template for handwriting practice or general writing. There are no margins, text, or other markings on the page.

Sample Answer

In recent years it has become far more normal for people to live alone, particularly in large cities in the developed world. In my opinion, this trend could have both positive and negative consequences in equal measure.

The rise in one-person households can be seen as positive for both personal and broader economic reasons. On an individual level, people who choose to live alone may become more independent and self-reliant than those who live with family members. A young adult who lives alone, for example, will need to learn to cook, clean, pay bills and manage his or her budget, all of which are valuable life skills; an increase in the number of such individuals can certainly be seen as a positive development. From an economic perspective, the trend towards living alone will result in greater demand for housing. This is likely to benefit the construction industry, estate agents and a whole host of other companies that rely on homeowners to buy their products or services.

However, the personal and economic arguments given above can be considered from the opposite angle. Firstly, rather than the positive feeling of increased independence, people who live alone may experience feelings of loneliness, isolation and worry. They miss out on the emotional support and daily conversation that family or flatmates can provide, and they must bear the weight of all household bills and responsibilities; in this sense, perhaps the trend towards living alone is a negative one.

Secondly, from the financial point of view, a rise in demand for housing is likely to push up property prices and rents. While this may benefit some businesses, the general population, including those who live alone, will be faced with rising living costs.

In conclusion, the increase in one-person households will have both beneficial and detrimental effects on individuals and on the economy.
